New Foreign Language Requirement

After serious consideration, the university has decided to institute a new foreign language requirement for all students who begin their studies next year or later. Specifically, students affected by the change must take at least three foreign language courses in order to earn their degrees. Because companies these days prefer bilingual candidates, speaking a second language will help students be more competitive when applying for jobs. Also, university officials believe that the new policy will enable students to communicate well with non-English speakers, putting them in a good position to thrive in the global era in which we live.

Scope Creep

In the course of executing a project, it is common for those involved to come up with ideas along the way that would improve or enhance the outcome. But when a project that is already in progress starts to expand beyond its original goals, it is experiencing what is known as scope creep. This can be caused by insufficient communication between parties about the overall aims of the project and by weak management that fails to set clear objectives or boundaries for the team. In general, scope creep is harmful since it leads to needless complications and unforeseen costs. This is because even though the project keeps expanding, usually there is no accompanying increase in time or budget.

Now get ready to answer the question.

Explain how the example from the lecture illustrates scope creep.
